

Brief Introduction

Main Content

Statistics in this chapter mainly consist of statistics for social activity participation, public security institutions, procuratorates, courts, judicial authorities, social security, women and children development planning and monitoring.

1. Statistics for social activity participation mainly consist of the numbers of deputies and proposals at people's congress and political consulting conferences of Beijing in previous years, women's federation and organizations and labor unions.

2. Statistics for public security institutions, procuratorates, courts, and judicial authorities cover the cases accepted and settled by public security organs, courts and procuratorates, the statistics on traffic accidents, safe production, and the information on lawyers, notary, mediation provided by juridical bureaus.

3. Statistics for social security mainly consist of the social security benefits level and the social security participation.

4. Supervisory data on women and children development program are composed of women's participation in decision making and management, employment, education, health, etc. as well as children's health, and so on.